“National Board certification provides so many benefits to teachers, students and schools. National Board-certified teachers are working together to shape educational policies and practices at the local, state and national levels. Teaching, more so than any other profession, determines our future and I have made lifting up the teaching profession a priority. That’s why we continue to work to ensure that New York educators are aware of the far-reaching benefits National Board certification brings to a school community, and to support those teachers who seek this extraordinary certification any way we can.”

Mary Ellen Elia, New York State Education Commissioner
